

Diversifying the Voice of Social Care R

These programmes were established on the back of enhanced understanding as to why social care staff were engaging less than health staff with wellbeing initiatives, and not just at who currently works in health and care, but also those more broadly who can support capacity in the community.

